

Comptroller of the Currency
Administrator of National Banks

US Department of the Treasury

Biographies

Jeri Gilland Deputy Comptroller for the Southern District

Jeri Gilland was appointed deputy comptroller of the Southern District of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) in October of 2002.

Ms. Gilland's portfolio includes 20 field offices, four satellite offices, and 695 financial institutions.

Ms. Gilland joined the OCC in 1974 and spent her early years as a field examiner and a field manager in Texas. During this time, she worked in a number of community and regional problem national banks. She also spent two years in licensing in the Dallas District Office.

Ms. Gilland transferred to headquarters in 1991 to become assistant chief national bank examiner, where she was responsible for developing policy for examiners and national banks. In 1997, Ms. Gilland returned to the field to become the deputy comptroller for the Midwestern District. Ms. Gilland then assumed responsibilities as deputy comptroller for Special Supervision/Fraud in November 2001.

Ms. Gilland is originally from Texas City, Texas. She obtained a bachelor's of arts in Economics and general business from the University of North Texas, Denton, Texas. She is also a graduate of the Southwestern Graduate School of Banking at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas.

